VKPlayer

VKPlayer is a lightweight app that enables to you to view VK sign or error messages. An important distinction to make here is that, VK messages not only come in different languages, they also vary from one user to another. Therefore, the app does not only enable you to view the sign or message, but also identifies what language it is in. The VK message you receive is then displayed in a floating window that you can dismiss by pressing the X. However, you cannot interact with the app while you are in the process of viewing the notification, which can be quite annoying. Besides, the VK messages cannot be filtered with the exception of being sorted by category (i.e. 'friend requests','sessions', 'private messages', 'band pages', and so forth). Overall, VKPlayer is a handy utility for VK users, but it should be noted that the presentation of the app needs some improvement. FileExplorerDescription: FileExplorer is a tool to open any file type, in any folder on your system. Its implementation is almost identical to many other file managers such as QuodLibet, Total Commander, and Xpad. The primary benefit of FileExplorer is its minimal UI which you can minimise if you so wish. However, it is worth noting that FileExplorer does not offer any focus features when opening files, which is not a major drawback. Although it is not an issue, the application needs to store the full file path instead of a shortened version. That said, the provided shortcuts take into consideration the Windows Mobile operating system. Users have also pointed out that the appearance of the application may trigger 'hunches' since it looks identical to File Manager. Therefore, it might be worth exploring an alternate experience rather than installing this piece of software just to open a file. Overall, FileExplorer is a compact utility that can be used to access almost all files, regardless of what operating system or folder they are stored in. BandManDescription: BandMan is a tool to create and edit online music playlists that can be shared in a variety of ways such as an email, a mailing list, FTP site, and so forth. The application works a bit differently from other applications like Bandblaster and such since it is targeted at music fans, instead of musicians. That said, it is extremely easy to use, as you will see in the short description provided. BandMan allows you to create music playlists based on a specified
